

The Helping

Hands Trust is still in its infancy, but the trustees remain resolute that it can indeed and must play a role in community development. The Trust has as its main objective the upliftment and betterment of impoverished communities, through assisting and partaking in projects that will create a safer and more sustainable society. Leadership development and improved education are two of the fundamental foundation blocks for community development.

To achieve the objectives of the Trust, the trustees need the support of all Metro Security Services employees and friends of the business. The improvement in conditions in our various communities will inevitably result in improved human relations, not only at our own Companies, but also in the communities at large. We remain positive that we can continue to count on your support.

As we approach the end of 2016, we can look back with pride on the Trust activities and the positive outcomes resulting there from. We hosted a very successful 2016 Golf Day and cannot afford to omit to extend our thanks and appreciation for the excellent support we received from our business friends. We also recognise that hard work that was put in by various employees which contributed towards the ultimate success of the event. Now that we have set the bar high, the 2017 golf day must, and will be an even greater success.

In line with our commitment to assist in providing improved educational opportunities, the Helping Hands Trust has formed a partnership with six senior secondary schools in Port Elizabeth's northern areas and the Nelson Mandela University's Centre for the Community School. The main aim of this partnership is to develop relationships that will support the schools to deal effectively with the many challenges they face.

We have also formed a partnership with Theba Trust, and will be supplying 40 schools in our area before the end of this term with library books, educational toys and writing boards.

It also gives me pleasure to advise that the Trust brochure is now available and that work has commenced on a Trust website.

On behalf of the board of trustees we wish you a joyous festive season and hope and a prosperous 2017.
